

Wall Street International

Victoire de Castellane
28 January - 1 February 2014 at Gagosian Gallery, London

Victoire de Castellane, 2013, Lunae Lumen Holly Colorum, Yellow gold, opal, diamonds, colored lacquer, 3 1/8 x 2 3/8 x 3 9/16 inches / 8 x 6 x 9 cm © Victoire de Castellane.
Courtesy Gagosian Gallery, Photo Vito Flamminio

My jewels are propositions. From the outset, this involves making an object that constructs itself out of many different things, and that sometimes ends up surpassing even what I had imagined for it. It is no longer primarily an accessory; it becomes something larger. It speaks about concept and form as opposed to objective value. It becomes sculpture. - Victoire de Castellane

Gagosian London is pleased to announce «animalvegetablemineral,» an exhibition of new works by Victoire de Castellane at the Davies Street gallery, following the acclaimed «Fleurs d'excès» at Gagosian Paris in 2011.

De Castellane's highly original collections for Dior have redefined and revived haute joaillerie for a new generation. In 2007, she began an independent practice as a sculptor of unique precious objects, each containing a wearable element--ring, bracelet, or necklace--that can be detached from its sculpted base.

De Castellane uses materials like no one before her. Her work puts essence and illusion into highly animated play, aided by a wacky irreverence that sets her apart in her field. «animalvegetablemineral» takes the very nature of materials as its starting point, inspired by the popular game derived from Linnaeus's taxonomy of the natural world. Precious stones are chosen for their sheer presence--from rough and free-shaped opals to brilliant-cut diamonds, sapphires, emeralds, and rubies of classic perfection. Solid gold settings are cunningly concealed by lacquering techniques that produce alien hues and textures--cyborg blooms in shiny bubblegum pink (Crystal Shocking Pink Baby) or sparkling galactic indigo (Cana Glitter Night Baby). Solid silver bases produced by traditional sand-casting form contoured «rocks» around which are coiled fabulous jeweled serpents (Lunae Lumen Holly Clorum); or mirror-polished droplets out of which flowering hybrids spring (Poppy Tomato Baby). In works such as Vitam Industria Abstract Sugar, abstract silver blocks, produced with the aid of digital prototyping, cradle dazzling compositions of cut and polished gems, alluding to the processes of geological evolution by which brute carbon transforms into precious stone.

Indifferent to convention though passionate about history and technical challenge, de Castellane's ideas are driven by her exuberant and restless imagination that derives inspiration from sources as diverse as the élan vital of the natural world and the synthetic wonders of Technicolor; the Brothers Grimm and Walt Disney; Hollywood screen idols and manga characters; the trash and fizz of pop culture and the darkest depths of the subconscious. The resulting forms conflate opposing systems: figurative and abstract, real and artificial, beautiful and grotesque, minimal and excessively baroque. Unprecedented in form and content, de Castellane's extreme and wondrous treasures are spirited ripostes to the perverse times in which we live.

Victoire de Castellane lives and works in Paris. Essentially self-taught--she attempted to make her first piece of jewelry at the age of five--she designed costume jewelry for Chanel for fourteen years. In 1998 she joined Dior as the first Creative Director of their new jewelry department, a role she continues to this day. Her first exhibition, «Belladone Island,» took place in Monet's Water Lilies rooms at L'Orangerie, Paris in 2007.

Gagosian Gallery
6-24 Britannia Street
London WC1X 9JD United Kingdom
Tel. + 44 207 8419960
london@gagosian.com
www.gagosian.com

Opening hours
Tuesday – Saturday
From 10am to 6pm

Related images

Victoire de Castellane, Crystal Shocking Pink Baby, 2013, Yellow gold, diamonds, colored lacquer, 3 1/8 x 3 9/16 x 3 9/16 inches / 8 x 9 x 9 cm © Victoire de Castellane. Courtesy Gagosian Gallery, Photo Vito Flamminio

Victoire de Castellane, Vitam Industria Abstract Sugar, 2013, White gold, diamonds, 3 1/8 x 3 9/16 x 3 9/16 inches / 8 x 9 x 9 cm © Victoire de Castellane. Courtesy Gagosian Gallery, Photo Vito Flamminio

Victoire de Castellane, Honey Florem Red Frutti, 2013, White gold, diamonds, 3 1/8 x 3 9/16 x 3 9/16 inches / 8 x 9 x 9 cm © Victoire de Castellane. Courtesy Gagosian Gallery, Photo Vito Flamminio

Published: Wednesday, 29 January 2014

Article by: WSI Administration

